10:00 am 11:30 am	Geek Report: Lessons Learned from the iPod Generation It's time to check in on how the "iPod Generation" is doing. Technology has radically transformed the way students read, listen to music, purchase gifts, watch television, make "friends" and socialize. This transformation has forever changed the book, music, television and movie industries. At this session we'll discuss if higher education is next in line. Are we immune from the decentralizing power of technology? If not, what can we do to help our students learn in a college environment that is significantly different from our own experience? Please join us for a challenging and invigorating discussion. Presented by Jim Gaston, Associate Director/Information Technology, SOCCCD	BGS 232
