COURSE DESCRIPTION:

Examination of computer information systems and their role in business including computer hardware and software, communications and networking concepts, programming techniques, e-commerce, ethics and security, database management systems, Internet usage, and system and application software. Students apply these concepts and methods through hands-on projects to develop computer-based solutions to business problems.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

1. Describe existing and emerging technologies and their impact on organizations and society.
2. Demonstrate an understanding of the development and use of information systems in business.
3. Demonstrate the ability to solve common business problems using appropriate Information Technology applications and systems, including spreadsheet and database software, and Internet technologies.
4. Demonstrate the ability to apply Internet security concepts when using Internet technologies, including email, World Wide Web, chat, instant messaging, podcasts, video, internet search, uploading and downloading, blogs, social networking, and e-commerce.
5. Define terms that are unique to the field of computers and information systems.
6. Describe the functions and uses of the hardware and software comprising a computer system.
7. Describe computer ethics, crime, and security.
8. Demonstrate the ability to locate, evaluate, synthesize, use, and communicate information in its various formats.
9. Compile a portfolio of computer-based, problem-solving, business related computer projects.
