The University of California (UC) system consists of 10 campuses and is world renowned for its academic excellence and research emphasis. Nine of the UC’s grant bachelors, masters, and doctorate degrees while UC San Francisco, UCSF, specializes in graduate, professional programs. UC campuses give highest priority for transfer admissions to community college transfer students. UC Berkeley is the only UC which operates on the semester system (Fall/Spring). All other UC campuses function on the quarter system (three quarters: fall, winter, and spring). At the undergraduate level (bachelors), students must be full-time, day students. No part-time enrollment or evening classes are available for students.

California's independent colleges and universities first opened their doors in 1851. Each college and university has its own unique strengths and character. Over 125 majors are offered throughout the 75 campuses in existence. Baccalaureate (Bachelor's), Master's and Professional degrees are awarded. Course requirements and filing deadlines for transfer to a private university or college vary with each institution. A student must meet the application and transfer requirements for each individual school they wish to apply. A student should make a counseling appointment at Saddleback College or contact a representative from the school of interest to discuss requirements for transfer.

This website provides a comprehensive index of all independent and private institutions in California. This site provides detailed college profiles, admission requirements, application deadlines, major and degrees offered, on-line applications, and other valuable information.

GUARANTEED TRANSFER ADMISSION AGREEMENTS

By maintaining the terms of the contract with the designated transfer university, the student is guaranteed admissions. The transfer admission contract is not binding. This means that the student may elect not to attend the university even after the guaranteed admissions contract has been fulfilled. Each university has different and specific terms and requirements. See a counselor for additional information.
