Dear Alannah,

Prof. Rosenberg apologizes for being -- shall we say, under-available? -- this past week by email and Blackboard. She did know she would have only intermittently reliable internet access, but she did not anticipate not being able to get any cellular reception either. All the trees in eastern Massachusetts seem to be real ones and not cell towers in disguise.

Yes, it is still snowing there. But there’s hail and freezing rain, too, just to show spring is on its way.

Next year there may be one or two new transfer partners out there for those of you interested in small liberal arts colleges and showing off your ability to look great even when you’re wearing four layers of thermal underwear.

UCLA STOMP!

Student Transfer Outreach and Mentor Program at UCLA
Friday, April 24th 2015 - 8:30am to 4:00pm

This is for everyone, not just Honors Program students. If want to be at UCLA in Fall 2016, be at UCLA April 24th. It is their biggest transfer event.

The Saddleback College Transfer Center offers free transportation to this event!

RE: Other UC campuses!

The University of California “TAG” has nothing to do with the Honors Program . . .

. . . but it's especially important for transfer to the UC campuses that do participate in it and that don't have explicit agreements with community college honors programs:

- Davis
- Merced
- Riverside
- Santa Barbara
- Santa Cruz

UC Irvine does have a TAG, but check with your Transfer Center counselor about whether it’s a good idea to use it there. You may have only one TAG, and you may want to use it at a campus where there is no other agreement.
UCLA, UC Berkeley, and UCSD do not have TAG available, but do remember that participation in honors programs is part of the comprehensive review of transfer applicants at all University of California campuses.

The Transfer Center has TAG workshops on several afternoons.

Attend one now if you’re interested in Fall 2016 transfer.
